

Electrical Engineering at Glasgow before joining the Factory Inspectorate, where his duties fortunately brought him to Aberdeen, and introduced him to the Club in 1941. In 1947 he transferred to the Ministry of Supply and was subsequently seconded to the Iron and Steel Board, where he held the responsible post of Chief Development Officer at the time of his death, being directly concerned with the organisation and rationalisation of the British steel industry.

J. B. McDONALD

J. B. McDonald will probably be best remembered for the very fine films of wild life in the mountains which entertained members at numerous indoor meets. Two in particular must be mentioned: the graphic record of a day's stalking and the vivid pictures of an eagle's nest near Derry Lodge. In the preparation of these films he was ably assisted by R. O. Mackay, who introduced him to the Club in 1939. Another of J. B. McDonald's climbing companions was Lord Malcolm Douglas Hamilton, with whom he climbed the Mitre Ridge in 1942.

J. B. McDonald was in business in Fraserburgh, and therefore not frequently seen at meetings or excursions. It was with deep regret that we heard of his death in 1958.

MARSHALL J. ROBB

Marshall Jeffreys Robb died in Aberdeen early in 1960 at the age of 71. Not many of our present members have had the pleasure of his company in the hills, for it is a number of years since he took a prominent part in Club affairs. He was a keen photographer who contributed several photographs to the Journal, notably at the time of the erection of the Macdhuì Indicator. He was a member of Committee during this period.

Marshall Robb was also a member of the Scottish Mountaineering Club, and served on their Committee from 1932 to 1935. His other outdoor interests included angling. He was associated for many years with Dr J. F. Tocher, public and agricultural analyst for Aberdeenshire and other north-eastern counties, and succeeded him in 1946, but had unfortunately to retire a year later because of ill-health. In the course of his professional duties he gained a wide
