

POST SCRIPT

As a closing word in my final Issue as Editor, I will mention finishing my round of the Corbetts on tiny but lovely Cnoc Coinnich on October 29th, 2023.

The day was very inclement with high winds and torrential rain, so Millie dog remained in the van. Taking Millie's place on Cnoc Coinnich was Alfie Dog summitting his very first Corbett.

Izy, Alfie, Jean and Mark on the summit of Cnoc Coinnich

Photo credit Phil Gorton

It was only as I was descending and looking across at the Cobbler that I recalled that over 40 years ago whilst working as a junior doctor in Yorkhill, Sick Childrens Hospital in Glasgow, the Cobbler was my first proper hillwalk. So, my final Corbett felt like a turn of the wheel.

Then as now, walking in our wonderful Scottish landscape was a great tonic and so, whether its multiday epics, a saunter up Bennachie or walking the dog, enjoy the freedom and pleasures of putting one foot in front of the other. Travel Well.

Jean Robinson

Descending Cnoc Coinnich 29/10/23

Photo credit Izy Kirkaldy